

Envizons To Unveil New EVO Design

Envizons Computer Entertainment Corporation announced that its new website will launch on March 31, 2006.

For Immediate Release

ANNISTON, Ala./EWORLDWIRE/March 14, 2006 --- Envizons Computer Entertainment Corporation announced that a new Web site will be launched on March 31, 2006. This new site will focus on more gaming and hardware information. "We felt that it was important to have a site that concentrated on EVO hardware and gaming aspects," CEO and Founder Derrick Samuels stated.

Also on March 31, 2006, the official EVO Phase One will be revealed for the first time. The current image was only a blueprint for the new and improved image that will be displayed at the end of the month. The system is scheduled to be seen at E3 this year in Los Angeles. In addition to that, the new site will have a beta test sign up form for beta test applicants.

"I am excited to show the world what we have been working on for three years," said Samuels. "EVO can be compared to a top secret project and the time has come to unveil the most exciting creation from Envizons."
