EDISON, N.J./EWORLDWIRE/June 26, 2006 --- The College of New Jersey (TCNJ) class of 2006 Adam Jay, resident of Edison, N.J., is actively seeking to set himself apart from peers with a similar educational component to their experience via an internship in information technology (IT) at World Internet Marketing, Inc. As a computer science major, the internship completes the final requirement for his undergraduate degree.

"At World Internet Marketing, I have a distinct opportunity to make a difference in the development of the company," Jay said. His primary reason for choosing the internship was the variety of projects he could be involved with. His focuses in this internship include system and network administration, along with learning and training other team members in content management systems, which will assist in develop new domains. Jay has experience in a variety of operating systems (OS) - Windows, Linux, UNIX, and Macintosh - which is a critical element in his work.

"My primary responsibilities are to make sure critical systems are functioning as they should be and that users have access to appropriate technology resources," Jay commented. In the internship, he aims to gain experience in a real-world setting, to make business connections and to network with others. "This is a place for me to sharpen my skills and expand on my knowledge base - on what I learned in college," Jay stated.

At TCNJ, Jay's concentration in computer science has been in software development. Aside from his studies, his hobbies include watching and collecting movies of all genres.
