For Immediate Release

KINNELON, N.J./EWORLDWIRE/June 26, 2006 --- Vassar College class of 2009 Matthew Leung, a resident of Kinnelon, New Jersey, selected World Internet Marketing, Inc. for his internship in journalism and broadcasting. In Succasunna, Leung has been directly interacting with current and potential clients, writing and editing press releases, producing video press releases and providing database support.

Leung finds his experience as Managing Editor of the Vassar campus newspaper, The Miscellany News, a strong complement for the internship. "I combine my areas of experience in journalism and broadcasting and develop them in a novel way: the company is quality-conscious and client-focused, and I work with individual clients to understand the goals they want to reach," Leung explained. His work in organizations such as The Miscellany News has not involved projects for individual clients.

Before reaching Vassar, Leung was the editor of the Kinnelon High School (class of 2005) newspaper, The Hitching Post; he was director of the high school's Morning Show, producer of his computer show, and he shadowed the work of technical directors at CBS Studios in New York City. "World Internet Marketing's environment allows me to interact directly with other peers: I work alongside professionals, while benefiting from their individual attention and building on my past experiences."

"I anticipate learning from this unique experience and applying it in the future as I pursue journalism and broadcasting," commented Leung. He also explained that the internship will help him decide on a future career path.

A native of Hong Kong, S.A.R. (special administrative region of China), Leung and his family moved to Kinnelon when he was ten. His major interests include technology, music, and philosophy. Before being elected to the position of Managing Editor, he served as Assistant Managing Editor of The Miscellany News. In his role as student representative on the Committee of Computing and Education Technology (CCET) at Vassar, he advises administrators on technology use on campus.
