For Immediate Release

RANDOLPH, N.J./EWORLDWIRE/June 26, 2006 --- Randolph, N.J. resident and Monmouth University class of 2006 student Darren Hsu began an internship at World Internet Marketing Inc. in Succasunna in graphic design. Hsu's internship marks one of the remaining steps to completing his academic pursuits in the fall.

Hsu's main responsibility is to design logos and marketing materials, along with enhancing and creating Web sites for both the company itself and its clients. "From the dozens of versions I create, one final version is typically chosen from which we work forward," commented Hsu. Though for some people the process could seem tedious, Hsu is passionate about this type of creativity and strongly believes it reflects design processes in the real world. "My main concern [for choosing this internship] was for the experience and to see first hand how I can work in a professional environment," Hsu stated.

Besides gaining experience working with clients, Hsu chose this internship as a gateway to his future career. "I aim to accomplish more for clients and the company," Hsu reflected, "This experience is a stepping stone along my path on finding a job I can bring my passion, enthusiasm and drive to."

Hsu's involvement in technology and graphic design at school prepared him well for success in the internship. He was involved in the Information Technology Association and worked for the Software Engineering Information Technology Department and the Student Technology Assistant Program (STAP). "My work for these two departments is a direct reflection of whom I am," Hsu commented.

Hsu will also receive a minor in History and Information Technology. His additional involvement in school includes the Self-Defense Club, History/Anthropology Club and Chess Club. When he's not working, he enjoys studying military history; playing chess, baseball, soccer, and tennis; and going fishing, camping, and hiking. "My goal is to do everything I want to in my life," said Hsu.
