

National Alliance For Workers And Employers Rights: Amnesty Republicans Create New Wave Of Unionism

Business groups have formed a business union alliance over the issue of amnesty. Republicans need to lead America on the immigration reform but immigration reform is also labor reform.

For Immediate Release

WASHINGTON, D.C./EWORLDWIRE/July 12, 2006 --- The following was released today by the National Alliance for Worker and Employer Rights (NAWER):

In a strongly written letter to Congressional leaders last week the National Alliance for Worker and Employer Rights called on the Republican leadership to reject Amnesty. Reject an Amnesty program NAWER named as "Sweeney's plan" that will only augment union tyranny on the backs of future workers nationwide, namely the 11,000,000 illegal aliens subjected to the violence and intimidation of rigged card checks when they become legal citizens. New citizens deserve the promise of American democracy not more unionization. The Secret Ballot Protection Act, once passed, will bring honor back into Republican hands. No more cites like Houston and Miami, where massive card check campaigns were won, will fall to the union hoards ever again.

"I don't get how some Republicans in Congress are not fighting against the unions on their card check organizing drives, yet they can support an Immigration law that will only help the unions grow stronger today," said Will Fine, executive director of the National Alliance for Worker and Employer Rights

Perhaps the reason Republicans are not fighting for SBPA and Amnesty together can be found in the business community and looming behind the business groups are not the unions hiding.
