

Training is Key for New Internet Business Venture: Coastal Sales Center Helps Single Stay-at-home Mom

With thousands of Internet money-making opportunities available today, many are not worth the price and often cost more than just money - lost time, energy and motivation.

For Immediate Release

INDEPENDENCE, Mo./EWORLDWIRE/July 30, 2007 --- There are a few Internet small business opportunities out there that are worth the time and money required to invest.

Recently, Brenda Rasa, a 43 year-old single mom has found the road to financial freedom with a great product and unique business model. That product is Coastal Vacations, a lifetime discount vacation membership, and the winning business model is the Coastal Sales Center (<http://www.coastal-vacations-4-life.com>).

Many people wish to own their own business or work out of their own home, to be available for their family, and to build and control a secure financial future for themselves. The big draw for many of the money-making opportunities out there is the ability to get started with little money. The big problem with these low cost opportunities is that there is little to no training or support once the package is purchased. Many are marketed as "turn-key" packages but the missing component in most of them is training.

To succeed in any business, entrepreneurs must have the right support and training available to them. Brenda Rasa has found that support and training through the Coastal Sales Center and her director who has provided unlimited support while Rasa was establishing her business.

According to Rasa, "Taking the time to research any potential business and picking one that provides large profits was my approach. Training has been the key for me. Anyone who is trainable, has time and access to money to invest in a true business can do this. The Coastal Sales Center team has everything you need to succeed."

Brenda Rasa is an IT project manager of 10 years, avid reader and author, and entrepreneur who is passionate about travel. She has actively pursued the best home business system that allows big commissions without selling.
