

Senior Homeowners Are Living Better, reports Sun West Mortgage Company

For Immediate Release

CERRITOS, Calif./EWorldWire/May 13, 2008 --- Seniors nationwide are taking full advantage of the government-insured Reverse Mortgage program to finance home repairs and improvements. Today, low interest rates have resulted in maximizing the amount of proceeds that a borrower may receive under the HUD HECM loan program.

"Senior homeowners' growing public awareness of reverse mortgages is causing many to get work done to their home now, instead of waiting," said Paul Scheper, a Certified Senior Advisor (CSA). According to Scheper, "A reverse mortgage enables homeowners over the age of 62 to turn a portion of their home's equity into cash that may be used for any purpose."

The reverse mortgage is just like a traditional mortgage but in reverse. Instead of making monthly payments to a lender, the lender makes loan advances to the homeowner. The amount senior homeowners may receive depends on their age, the current interest rate, and their home's value. The borrower can never owe more than the value of the home, and best of all, there is no repayment of the loan for as long as the senior occupies their residence. Qualifying for a reverse mortgage is simple and does not factor income, health, assets or employment.

"I would recommend a reverse mortgage to others in a New York minute. I think that more people need to hear about them," says Priscilla Copeland, a Mesa, Ariz., homeowner who chose Sun West for her reverse mortgage. She used the proceeds of her reverse mortgage to make necessary home repairs, as well as paying off her children's college education. "A reverse mortgage is the only way to go. It was definitely the answer for me."

Though seniors will benefit from improvements in their home, they must properly select and manage their contractors. For more information and specific guidance on this subject, seniors should consult various consumer protection resources available. One good place to start is the National Consumer Law Center, "Consumer Concerns for Older Americans" at http://www.consumerlaw.org/initiatives/seniors_initiative/home_improv.shtml.
