

Gardner Energy MacroIndex Gains 1.96 Percent In June

For Immediate Release

ZUG, Switzerland/EWORLDWIRE/Aug. 15, 2008 --- Gardner Finance AG (Gardner) reports that the Gardner Energy MacroIndex(R) (GEMI(R)), an Index which tracks actively the performance of energy hedge funds across a number of carefully selected strategies, gained 1.96 percent in June, 2008. The GEMIs gains were driven by performance in the Long/Short Equity and Relative Value trading components of the multi-strategy index.

About GEMI

Energy is the cornerstone of modern life and offers immense investment potential. For this reason, Gardner Finance has developed the Gardner Energy MacroIndex (GEMI). Its aim is to cover the entire value chain of energy generation. The GEMI Index is unique to the market place as no other active hedge fund performance index product has such a strategy or composition. Its objective is to provide investors with a macro view on global energy markets by looking at the performance of selected investment vehicles belonging to the investment class "Energy Hedge Funds. Objective criteria, arranged in a proprietary selection matrix, are applied in selecting the energy hedge funds to be included in the Index as components. The Index includes components representative of a careful hypothetical investment in the investment class "Energy Hedge Funds" to make it suitable for use as a benchmark by investors in international energy markets. More information on GEMI can be obtained at '<http://www.macroindex.com>'.
