SANTA CLARITA, Calif./EWORLDWIRE/Oct. 3, 2008 --- The second Annual Orange County Spanish Journalism Conference, hosted by Cal State Fullerton, invited Power Media Group to conduct and bring all their expertise about actual Hispanic market, strategies and real facts of the growing buying power. It brings together Spanish-speaking journalism and broadcasting professionals from Orange and Los Angeles counties for a series of workshops focusing on the language of Spanish multicultural journalism.

This event is hosted by Cal State Fullerton and the CSUF chapter of the Society of Professional Journalists, Student Organizations Accessing Resources - Communications Interclub Council, Casa Guanajuato and Fundacin Yanga-Veracruz USA.

"We are once again flattered that we were invited by Janet Hernandez and sponsors to participate in this great event, as we are proud to report that Hispanics are the largest minority in the United States," said Patricia Gracia, formerly of Lima, Peru. "Not only because of our purchasing power, is that we are proud of our culture and our language, Spanish."

This event will be from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. on Friday, Oct. 3, in the Portola Pavilion of Cal State Fullerton's Titan Student Union. Registration begins at 8:30 a.m. The conference is free and open to students, faculty, staff and the public.

The conference will explore multicultural communication within Spanish media and the challenges of addressing Spanish speakers from different countries of origin. Other topics will include new reporting techniques and technologies, citizen reporting and content creation, blogging and immigration, among other topics in the news.

The participation of Power Media Group and CEO Tony Gracia from Puerto Rico is accompanied by reporters and professionals from local Univision, Telemundo and Azteca America TV stations, as well as La Opinion, Excelsior, Miniondas and Farandula USA newspapers, plus other local media outlets, as scheduled presenters. Conference sessions will be conducted primarily in Spanish, giving students interested in a career in the growing field.
