The story about how there is love for everybody if you just be yourself

For Immediate Release

LOS ANGELES/EWORLDWIRE/Oct. 29, 2009 --- Youth in their teens and early twenties get the insider's view of the actions some people will take for love in Director P.B. Floyd's film, "G Love" which has won a prestigious Award of Merit from The Accolade Film Awards Competition.

Floyd took time from working on his new teen dance family film, "I Wanna Dance," to work on "G Love." The short romantic comedy, starring Seth Donovan as Steven Dork, presents the idea that there is love for everybody, if they can just be themselves.

Since winning the award, Floyd is making plans to produce "G Love" into a feature-length film to share more of the humor and imagination Donovan's Dork character brings to a wide-theatrical release.

"With the comedic talent of Jim Carrey, and the looks of a young Tom Hanks, Seth Donovan is making his mark to ensure his spot at the top of the motion picture industry," Floyd said.

"Seth really stood out as Steven Dork," Floyd said. "His quirky reactions and cool responses made this movie more intense. He did a great job of feeding off the other actors' energy to help deliver the story with a lot of finesse."

"The entire production team, including editor Devon V. Collins and sound designer Mike Snugg, created an exceptional product," said Donovan, who also produced the film. "This extraordinary team was able to put together a final product that surprised even us with its polish and sparkle. By the ending of the script's deliverance, I recognized that this could be something special."
