COOP Consulting Announces Spring COOP Certified Course Schedule

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

RESTON, Va./EWorldWire/March 10, 2003 --- COOP Consulting (www.coop-consulting.com) today announced a final public schedule for its Spring series of certified Continuity of Operations training courses in the DC area, starting on March 24. Since the start of its training series in mid-2002, done in conjunction with DRI International (www.drii.org), students have been taught from nine federal agencies, including large-scale programs with two early responder agencies. COOP Consulting's training, delivered in both private and public venues by certified trainers, has three formats for clients.

*
The basic curriculum is done in four parts, each 2 1/2 days, and is focused on inexperienced continuity planners.

*
An advanced program covers the same material for more experienced professionals, and takes a week.

An exam preparation course lasting a total of 2 1/2 days is geared for very experienced continuity planners. All three curriculums end with a certification test, to enable participants to join the world-wide body of certified continuity planning professionals, as administered by the DRI International.

"Considering the long decision times traditional in government procurement, and the lack of new budget money, we've been pleasantly surprised by the number of federal agencies sending people to our classes," said Chris Alvord, CEO of COOP Consulting. "It speaks to the quality of the courses, at a time when agencies are trying to improve their COOP planning process."
