

Abraham Center of Life No Longer in Embryo Business

For Immediate Release

SAN ANTONIO, Texas/EWORLDWIRE/May 30, 2007 --- The Abraham Center of Life LLC is sorry to announce that they will no longer offer embryos to potential infertile families.

The company, owned by Jennalee Ryan, who also operates Abagails Silver Spoon Adoptions, was created as a very cost effective method of pregnancy for infertile families.

Contrary to some reports, The Abraham Center of Life was never established to generate revenue but as a way of "giving back" by giving an opportunity to so many people desperate for a child that cannot afford the extremely high cost of adoption.

At the very best, it was a break even enterprise. However, regrettably, it is no longer cost effective to operate at such an extreme loss.

It will, however, continue as an advertising agency for surrogates and egg donors, and attempt to offer options to the thousands of potential parents that have contacted them worldwide.
