Thursday at 2:30 p.m. at 1780 S. Bellaire St., Denver.

For Immediate Release

DENVER/EWORLDWIRE/Nov. 1, 2012 --- Active duty, reserve, or veteran of the U.S. Armed Services looking for a cause-driven career, that allows them to continue to serve the community while also achieving personal growth and financial goals could be found at LegalShield (<http://www.legalshield.com>).

LegalShield will be hosting a presentation on Thursday, Nov. 8, 2012, at 2:30 p.m., with guest speaker Chris Ward, executive director of LegalShield. After 11 years of service in the U.S. Army, he decided to live his life on his own terms. After starting two businesses, he was introduced to LegalShield. While in the Army, he realized the work he was most passionate about was helping to enforce human rights in developing countries. LegalShield has given him the opportunity to continue his passion and instill these principles in the U.S. in a different manner that also allows Ward the flexibility he desires.

The Denver Post cites the U.S. Small Business Administration, saying: "Nearly one in ten small businesses are veteran-owned, and retired service members are at least 45 percent more likely than those without active-duty military experience to be self-employed."

Come see how LegalShield makes it possible to join the ranks of small business owners in the Denver Area.

To register for this event, visit <http://legalshieldcolorado.eventbrite.com> or register in person by arriving half an hour early. The LegalShield Colorado Associate Office will hold this event at 1780 S. Bellaire St., Denver, CO, 80222. Attire is business or business casual, and admission is free to all registered.

LegalShield was one of the first companies in the United States organized solely to design, underwrite and market legal expense plans to consumers. It has been in business for nearly 40 years and now provides legal services to over 1.4 million families across the U.S. and Canada.
